

My husband and I are both public school teachers and we work with youth at our church. We are extremely aware of the need for the Air 1 radio station. Young people respond to music and, knowing that, we must make good music available to them. In this postmodern culture where much of the music offered to young people sells them a nihilistic worldview, Air1 radio offers people a positive message full of hope. To take Air1 off the air is wrong. There is nothing else available. In fact, I have several friends who live in the Long Beach, CA, area who want to move out to the Inland Empire just so their teenagers can have access to Air1 over the radio. Parents are so concerned about what their children are listening to, but, without Air 1, there is no alternative. Air1 is the only viable option, and taking it off the air is absolutely unconscionable.